

Open Call: Community Conversations

Bristol City Council is developing a new Cultural Strategy.

As part of this process, we're commissioning Bristol-based artists, collectives, cultural and creative organisations and practitioners to engage underrepresented communities in meaningful conversations about culture.

We want to hear directly from people across Bristol about how culture is experienced in everyday life, what matters to them, and how the new strategy can reflect their needs, hopes and realities.

We're especially interested in working with those who are already rooted in communities and who understand how creativity can spark dialogue, build trust, and amplify a wide range of voices.

What are the commissions?

Commissions are for you to develop and deliver a community project, event(s) or gathering(s) that will bring people together to share experiences and ideas around culture, creativity and community life in Bristol. These conversations will help shape the development of the Cultural Strategy.

There are 7 types of commissions available, worth up to £4500 each.

Each commission will focus on engagement with one of the following underrepresented communities:

- People living in areas of highest deprivation & low-income households
- Disabled people, including Blind and d/Deaf communities
- Mental health and those with long-term health conditions
- Older people experiencing isolation
- Young people
- Refugees and migrant communities
- Global majority communities

You can apply to more than one commission if you work with more than one theme as listed above. Please specify this in your application.

What are we looking for?

We're looking for creative projects that spark conversations about culture in everyday life.

We're especially interested in ideas that invite people to reflect on questions like:

- What does culture mean to you?
- Where does it happen? What does it look like in everyday life?
- Why does it matter, and how do you experience or access it?
- What gets in the way, and what would make it easier to take part?

We're not looking for a set format. Your project could be a series of workshops, a show or performance, a community podcast, an online or in person discussion, a creative gathering in the daytime or the evening, or something entirely different.

Your project must be delivered within 8 weeks and finish by 15th June 2026. Each project should also support participants to take part in Bristol's citywide Culture Survey, launching in 2026.

We're interested in how you creatively document conversations, insights and experiences that emerge. You'll be asked to share this in a format that reflects your practice and community, e.g. visual artwork, illustration, poetry, audio, short film, or photography, or another creative form.

We welcome new ideas, as well as proposals that build on existing work and relationships within your community.

Our decision-making process

There are two stages to our decision-making process for awarding funding.

Stage 1 – Assessment

Applications will be assessed by members of Bristol City Council's Arts Development team using a clear scoring system. Answers will be given a score between 0–3, based on how well the question has been answered. The scores are added together to give a total score.

Stage 2 – Balancing the investment

A decision-making panel will review and discuss the highest scoring applications. The panel includes members of the Arts Development team and other council officers with relevant expertise in the areas of Community Engagement, Equalities, Legal and Business/Finance. We may also invite other people with relevant expertise to take part.

The panel will consider the highest scoring applications in relation to our balancing criteria. We do this in order to consider the spread of investment that we want to make. Our intention is each fund will be as representative as possible in terms of diversity, range of art forms, geographical location and the communities they serve.

We will consider applications against the following balancing criteria:

- Geographical location (with a particular focus on Bristol City Council's priority areas)
- Range of art forms (visual art, music, dance, theatre, festivals etc.)
- Evidence of working with groups with protected characteristics

Applicants will be informed if their application has been successful or not in February 2026.

How to apply

Please submit your application via our online form. Please note you need to fill in your application in one session. You cannot save your application and come back later to submit it.

We recommend you create a draft of your application using the guidance template before you start the online form. You can then copy your text across. All the prompts for the questions are within the guidance template.

Preparing your application

Some of the questions in the application form have a word count limit. These questions are clearly on the guidance template.

The online form will not allow you to exceed the word limit so please use a word count checker when drafting your application.

If you can answer the question as fully as possible in less than the maximum word count that's fine also; you won't be penalised. You are welcome to use bullet points in your answers.

Completing your application

You will need to confirm your eligibility at the beginning of the application.

The application form asks you for an outline budget and project timeline. If you are successful in your application, you will be asked to submit more detailed versions of these. These documents need to be reviewed and agreed with the arts development team before you can receive any funding.

You must complete your application by 5pm on Monday 12th January 2026.
